OCIL 21823 C

WILD HORSE MESA Photoplay in 8 reels From Zane Grey's novel Screen Play by Lucien Hubbard Directed by George B. Seitz, Author of the photoplay (under section 62) Famous Players Lasky Corporation of U.S.

"Wild Horse Mesa" Is 7 Reels—7164 Feet Long

Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa In Thundering Melodra

In "Wild Horse Mesa" exhibitors have the type of melodra-matic western that offers infinite exploitation possibilities. course, the outstanding feature that stamps this picture as radically different from the average western is its "wild horse" theme, and this fact should be played up in the exploitation as well as the advertising and publicity.

The production is a dramatic protest against cruelty to animals. It offers a splendid opportunity to tie up with Humane Societies, the Soci-ety for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, etc., by means of a "Kindness to Animals Week." Hold a special showing a couple of weeks in advance of your playdate for the city officials, newspaper editors, teachers, etc. Tell them that you intend to dedicate the picture to the horsemost faithful and helpful of animals since the beginning of time. And get their cooperation in helping you put the "Week" over!

Book tie-ups not only on "Wild Horse Mesa" but all Zane Grey books. Same with circulating and public Street Stunt - One or more fine looking horses led through the streets by one or more "cow-boys." Blankets on them (the horses not the cowboys) reading: It's "plane" 2 B "scene"

we are tamed, but see our wild relatives in Zane Grey's WILD HORSE MESA Rialto Theatre Now!

Lobby-It should carry out the western atmosphere of the story. A couple of men dressed as cowboys or Indians would add to the realistic effect.

Window tie-ups-With toy and department stores selling hobby horses, toy horses, etc. Card reading: "These are wild enough for the kiddies, but kids from 16 to 60 will enjoy the thrills of WILD HORSE MESA at the Rialto."

Street Stunt-If you can get a decidedly spirited, shying horse with a man who can lead and control him, blanket the horse:

I'm a wild mare from WILD HORSE MESA If you want thrills, see the Zane Grey-Paramount Picture at the Rialto!

For a comedy stunt, use the worst old nag you can find, using same copy as above.

Tie-ups - With stores selling riding equipment. Card reading: "Your horse may not be as wild as those in WILD HORSE MESA, but you've got to be dressed-properly just the same. Get your rid-ing accessories here."

Street Stunt — The most amus-ing attention-getter would be to hire a horse costume, such as you've seen in musical shows, which is handled by two men. They can make the through any number of funny antics. Have it blanketed

I've just arrived from WILD HORSE MESA

Locate men in your town who have had experiences wild horse hunting and get stories from them for the newspapers describing their adventures. You might even get one to give a five minute talk at each exhibition of the picture.

If possible, try to get the police authorities to rope off a whole street and plant a sign in the center reading: "This street reserved for the wild horses from WILD HORSE MESA." Similar signs should be planted on all empty lots.

Film Facts in Taoloid

Featured Players Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. strategic positions, were required make up the powerful quartet of to "shoot" the spectacular stam-Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. featured players, who are in per-

Mr. Glennon's supervision twelve assistant cameramen, stationed at pede scenes.

LLUSTRATED above is the colored banner on "Wild Horse Mesa."

Size 3' x 10' Only $2.00. See sample at your nearest exchange.

Adolph Zukor and ZANE REY'S "WILD HOLSE

with Jack Holt, Non Beery, Bil and Douglas Fairbanks, J

Screen play by Lucien Hubba Directed by

A Paramo nt Picture

corge B. Seits

SCENE FROM ZANE GREY'S WILD HORSE ME

Three-column Production M

Advance Newspa

"Wild Horse Mesa", Zane Grey Melo-Thriller, Due at Rialto

ILD Horse Mesa," a spectacular film version of Zane Grey's justly famous novel of the same name, opens next Sunday at the Rialto Theatre for a three days' run. This unique melodrama is Paramount's thundering answer to those blasé Paramo

Paramo blooded and this r "Wild H

Anything in This Press Sheet May Be Reprinted

se Mesa" Is Something New lodr-matic Western Productions

Adolph Zukor and

ZANE

VILD HO

th Jack Holt, No. and Douglas

Screen play by Directed by A Paramo L. Lasky Present

SE MESA" Beery, Billie Dove airbanks, Jr.

cien Hubbard ge B. Seitz Picture

OLORED in bold, commanding tones, they'll see it a mile off.

You need this great piece of advertising for your campaign.

BILLIE DOVE IN A

Three-column Pr

e New paper Stories

duction Mat 3P

Grey er, Due at Rialto

ctacular film version famous novel of the y at the Rialto Theis unique melodrama Paramount Film Version of New Zane Grey Story Coming Sunday

Paramount has picturized another of those redplooded stories from the facile pen of Zane Grey, and this new and high-powered western melodrama, 'Wild Horse Mesa," will make its local debut at

Lively Plot Reinforced by Spirited Cast and Majestic Settings

Tremendous Stampede of Thousands of Terror-Stricken Wild Horses Is Spectacular Climax in Thrill-Packed Picture

his colorful tales of the old West | headed by Lige Melberne. in all their gripping realism to the screen, find dynamic expression in a new and unique melodramatic photoplay, "Wild Horse Mesa," directed by George B. Seitz from Mr. Grey's widely read novel of the same name.

Here is a stirring story of the rugged West, staged against nature's own wilderness backgrounds, and filled with thrilling episodes of wild horse hunting and capturing, of horse thieves, perilous trails, faithful Indians, roaring romance and adventurous drama.

The exciting action centers about Chane Weymer, a daring and Jr., gives an excellent account fearless nomad of the plains, whose bimself as Holt's younger bro

Z ANE GREY'S genius for desire to capture Panguitch, a story-telling and Paramount's magnificent wild stallion, prompts superlative skill in transferring him to join a hunting expedition,

> The plot sweeps along irresistibly, developing its powerful situations with compelling force and ever-increasing suspense until it reaches a crashing climax in the terrific stampede of several thousand fear-crazed wild horses-one of the most spectacular and aweinspiring scenes ever flashed on the screen.

> Jack Holt has the picturesque role of the dare-devil hero; Noah Beery, as usual, is admirably effective as the two-gun outlaw; Billie Dove makes an appealing heroine; and Douglas Fairbank

Cast

방에 하는 사람들이 어린 가장 없었다. 나는 가지 않는 것이 하는 것이 없는 것이 없는 것이 없다면 하는데 하는데 없었다.
Chane Weymer	Jack Holt
Bud McPherson	Noah Beery
Sue Melberne	Billie Dove
Chess Weymer	Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.
Bent Manerube	George Magrill
Lige Melberne	George Irving
Grandma Melberne	Edith Yorke
Toddy Nokin	Bernard Seigle
Sosie	Margaret Morris

Synopsis

remote valleys of Colorado, is persuaded by Bent Manerube, an admirer of his daughter, Sue, to finance and head an expedition to catch and sell wild horses.

Manerube's idea is to build a big trap by fencing off a funnelshaped canyon with barbed wire into which the horses are to be driven by stampeding them. Convinced that there is a fortune in the scheme, Melberne organizes

IGE Melberne, owner of a treat her, with the result that she general store in one of the eventually returns to the Indian camp in a dying condition.

Chane, haggard with suffering and hunger, finally stumbles into the Melberne camp in the Wild Horse Valley. Sue nurses him back to health, and a romance develops between them. When Chane hears of Manerube's scheme and sees the vicious barbed wire fence that has been constructed, he warns Melberne that if the plan is carried out, it will result in half of the horses being killed when

In "Wild Horse Mesa" exhibitors have the type of melodramatic western that offers infinite exploitation possibilities. course, the outstanding feature that stamps this picture as radically different from the average west-ern is its "wild horse" theme, and this fact should be played up in the exploitation as well as the advertising and publicity.

The production is a dramatic protest against cruelty to animals. It offers a splendid opportunity to tie up with Humane Societies, the Societies, ety for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, etc., by means of a "Kind-ness to Animals Week." Hold a speness to Animals Week." Hold a special showing a couple of weeks in advance of your playdate for the city officials, newspaper editors, teachers, etc. Tell them that you intend to dedicate the picture to the horsemost faithful and helpful of animals the healthing of time. And get since the beginning of time. And get their cooperation in helping you put the "Week" over!

Book tie-ups not only on "Wild Horse Mesa" but all Zane Grey books. Same with circulating and public libraries.

Street Stunt — One or more fine looking horses led through the by one or more "cow-Blankets on them (the horses not the cowboys) reading: It's "plane" 2 B "scene"

we are tamed, but see our wild relatives in a Zane Grey's WILD HORSE MESA Rialto Theatre Now!

Lobby-It should carry out the western atmosphere of the story. A couple of men dressed as cowboys or Indians would add to the realistic effect.

Street Stunt-If you can get a decidedly spirited, shying horse with a man who can lead and control him, blanket the horse:

HORSE MESA at the Rialto."

I'm a wild mare from WILD HORSE MESA If you want thrills, see the Zane Grey-Paramount Picture at the Rialto!

For a comedy stunt, use the worst old nag you can find, using same copy as above.

Tie-ups - With stores selling riding equipment. Card reading: "Your horse may not be as wild as those in WILD HORSE MESA, but you've got to be dressed-properly just the same. Get your riding accessories here."

Street Stunt — The most amusing attention-getter would be to hire a horse costume, such as you've seen in musical shows, which is handled by two men. They can make to horse' go through any number of funny antics. Have it blanketed

I've just arrived from WILD HORSE MESA

Locate men in your town who have had experiences wild horse hunting and get stories from them for the newspapers describing their adventures. You might even get one to give a five minute talk at each exhibition of the picture.

If possible, try to get the police authorities to rope off a whole street and plant a sign in the center reading: "This street reserved for the wild horses from WILD HORSE MESA." Similar signs should be planted on all empty lots.

Film Facts in Tabloid

Featured Players

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. make up the powerful quartet of featured players, who are in perfect harmony with their respective roles.

Director

George B. Seitz, who has made an enviable record as a producer of actionful pictures. Melodrama is his forte and he proves it with this production.

Author

Zane Grey and the far West are synonymous in the minds of millions of fiction readers. In "Wild Horse Mesa" he has peopled a practically unknown region of the American wilderness with a number of extraordinary characters and evolved a plot around the great herds of wild horses that is tense, gripping and unusual.

Scenarist

Lucien Hubbard, whose graphic adaptation contributes in great measure to the realism of the photoplay.

Type of Story

A stirring drama of the West in which an attempt is made to stampede several thousand wild horses into a vicious barbed wire corral at the risk of killing half of them, the remaining half to be sold to commission men as a means of quick wealth. A story of thundering thrills and tender romance.

Cameraman

photograph this picture may be the treacherous trap is enough to gained from the fact that under make any audience gasp.

Mr. Glennon's supervision twelve assistant cameramen, stationed at strategic positions, were required to "shoot" the spectacular stampede scenes.

Highlights

As is typical of all Zane Grey pictures, this one is made up of exciting, adventurous events, but with this difference: "Wild Horse Mesa" has several brand new thrills that audiences have never

The love theme is intensely dramatic. The hero's own brother is his rival and there is the further complication of a third suitor and also the unwelcome advances of an outlaw. On top of this, the Indian chief's attractive daughter is hopelessly infatuated with the hero.

One of the big punch scenes is the pursuit of Jack Holt by three horse thieves in which he is forced to plunge into a swiftly moving stream on horseback to escape. He fords the dangerous current at the risk of his life.

The fight between Holt and Magrill is one of the realistic highspots in the production.

Another scene charged with excitement and suspense is that in which Toddy Nokin, Piute Indian chief, avenges his daughter and saves Billie Dove.

The crowning thrill is the headlong charge at terrific speed of thousands of wild horses down the sides of a canyon toward a barbed wire trap. Holt's breakneck ride Bert Glennon. Some idea of in front of the frenzied tide of what a tremendous job it was to horses to swerve them away from

Mesa.'

Size 3' x 10' Only $2.00. See sample at your nearest exchange.

with Jack Holt, Non Beery, Billie and Douglas Tairbanks, Jr. Screen play by ucien Hubbard Directed by George B. Seitz A Paramos no Picture

SCENE FROM ZANE GREY'S WILD HORSE MESA

Three-column Production Mat 3P

Advance Newspape

"Wild Horse Mesa", Zane Grey Melo-Thriller, Due at Rialto

ILD Horse Mesa," a spectacular film version of Zane Grey's justly famous novel of the same name, opens next Sunday at the Rialto Theatre for a three days' run. This unique melodrama is Paramount's thundering answer to those blasé films fans who insist there is nothing new in west-

For if capturing a magnificent wild stallion isn't new-if the spectacle of thousands of wild horses charging at terrific speed down the sides of a steer anvon toward a treacherous barbed wire trap is startlingly thrilling and different - if a dr romance, in which the hero has for his rivals no only a desperate outlaw and a cunning horse thief but his own younger brother, isn't decidedly novel -then "Wild Horse Mesa" is not a radical departure in western productions.

On the other hand, if these dynamic scenes—and they are but a few of the many to be found in this thrill-packed picture - have never before been flashed on the screen then Paramount and Zane Grey deserve salvos of applause for producing a swift, exciting and picturesque photoplay, which has the added merit of being original.

George B. Seitz, who directed the picture, has done himself proud in the matter of cast. No better choice for the role of the hard-riding, up-standing, horse-wrangling hero could have been made than that of Jack Holt, nationally known for his horsemanship and one of the finest actors in filmdom. Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are the other featured players.

The action of the story deals with the capturing and selling of wild horses on a wholesale scale, and the locale, Red Lake, Arizona, an exact duplicate of Wild Horse Mesa, a vast and almost unscalable table land in Utah, from which the novel and film get their titles, is a setting of the most primitive natural beauty, scarcely equalled in the West.

Paramount Zai

Paramount blooded stories and this new as "Wild Horse the Rialto nex

To the lively compelling dra tic background Meso- gigan nhed midta .turing such eery, Billie I Interwoven has to do with of wild horses, prising twist, ple whose love "Wild Hors Hubbard and vance advices thousand thril milestoned wit tions that are which several are stampeded

For years Th as the habitat is for the purp sale scale in or that an exped Melberne, pen the wild horse

Chane Weyn nined to captu horses, joins M the action take the further dev outlaws and In ith Jack Holt, Nov. Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Screen play by Lucien Hubbard Directed by learge B. Seitz A Paramo nt Picture mile off.

You need this great piece of advertising for your campaign.

Majestic Settings

Tremendous Stampede of Thousands of Terror-Stricken Wild Horses Is Spectacular Climax in Thrill-Packed Picture

Z ANE GREY'S genius for desire to capture Panguitch, a story-telling and Paramount's magnificent wild stallion, prompts superlative skill in transferring him to join a hunting expedition, his colorful tales of the old West headed by Lige Melberne. in all their gripping realism to the screen, find dynamic expression in a new and unique melodramatic photoplay, "Wild Horse Mesa," directed by George B. Seitz from Mr. Grey's widely read novel of the same name.

Here is a stirring story of the rugged West, staged against nature's own wilderness back-grounds, and filled with thrilling episodes of wild horse hunting and capturing, of horse thieves, perilous trails, faithful Indians, roaring romance and adventurous

The exciting action centers about

The plot sweeps along irresistibly, developing its powerful situations with compelling force and ever-increasing suspense until it reaches a crashing climax in the terrific stampede of several thousand fear-crazed wild horses—one of the most spectacular and aweinspiring scenes ever flashed on the screen.

Jack Holt has the picturesque role of the dare-devil hero; Noah Beery, as usual, is admirably effective as the two-gun outlaw Billie Dove makes an appealing heroine; and Douglas Fairbank Chane Weymer, a daring and Jr., gives an excellent account fearless nomad of the plains, whose himself as Holt's younger bro

JACK HOLT AND ILLIE DOVE IN A REY'S WILD HOSE MESA A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

New paper Stories

acular film version

mous novel of the

at the Rialto The-unique melodrama

ver to those blasé

thing new in west-

wild stallion isn't

ids of wild horses

the sides of a steep bed wire trap i.

for his rivals not

inning horse thief

- if a dr

Three-column Pr luction Mat 3P

Paramount Film Version of New Zane Grey Story Coming Sunday , Due at Rialto

> Paramount has picturized another of those redblooded stories from the facile pen of Zane Grey, and this new and high-powered western melodrama, Wild Horse Mesa," will make its local debut at the Rialto next Sunday.

> To the lively plot, full of adventurous action and compelling drama, staged against a rugged, majestic background — a duplicate of the Wild Horse Mesone gigantic and practically inaccessible wilged sett ah,—has been added a spirited cast turing such sterling favorites as Jack Holt, Noah ery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

nterwoven with the theme of the story, which to do with the capturing, taming and selling wild horses, is a virile romance that has a surising twist, since it involves a half a dozen peoe whose love affairs are strangely crisscrossed.

"Wild Horse Mesa" was adapted by Lucien Iubbard and directed by George B. Seitz. Adance advices hail it as "the production of a housand thrills," for from start to finish it is milestoned with gasp-provoking scenes and situtions that are topped by a smashing climax in which several thousand terror-stricken wild horses are stampeded into a vicious barbed wire corral.

For years The Wild Horse Mesa has been known as the habitat of magnificent wild horses, and it is for the purpose of rounding them up on a wholesale scale in order to sell them to commission men, that an expedition, headed and financed by Lige Melberne, penetrates the primitive fastnesses of the wild horse country.

Chane Weymer, a lover of horses, who has deterained to capture Penguitch, the leader of the wild horses, joins Melberne's outfit. From that point the action takes several surprising turns, and in the further development of the story, horse thieves, outlaws and Indians play a stirring part.

Cast

Chane Weymer	Jack Holt
Bud McPherson	Noah Beery
Sue Melberne	Billie Dove
Chess Weymer	Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.
Bent Manerube	George Magrill
Lige Melberne	George Irving
Grandma Melberne	Edith Yorke
Toddy Nokin	Bernard Seigle
Sosie

Synopsis

general store in one of the remote valleys of Colorado, is persuaded by Bent Manerube, an admirer of his daughter, Sue, to finance and head an expedition to catch and sell wild horses.

Manerube's idea is to build a big trap by fencing off a funnelshaped canyon with barbed wire into which the horses are to be driven by stampeding them. Convinced that there is a fortune in the scheme, Melberne organizes an outfit, and, accompanied by his daughter and his clerk, Chess Weymer, starts out for Wild Horse Mesa, a vast and almost unscalable table land in Utah, the retreat of herds of wild horses

Chane Weymer, Chess' older

IGE Melberne, owner of a treat her, with the result that she eventually returns to the Indian camp in a dying condition.

Chane, haggard with suffering and hunger, finally stumbles into the Melberne camp in the Wild Horse Valley. Sue nurses him back to health, and a romance develops between them. When Chane hears of Manerube's scheme and sees the vicious barbed wire fence that has been constructed, he warns Melberne that if the plan is carried out, it will result in half of the horses being killed when they are stampeded into the trap.

Convinced at last that the scheme is a barbarous one, Melberne refuses to go through with it. Manerube, after being severely thrashed by Chane, with whom he brother, who is known as "the best wrangler in the wild horse country," has his heart set on cap-turing Penguitch, a magnificent stallion, leader of the wild horses. To realize his ambition, Chane enlists the help of his friend, Toddy Nokin, chief of the Piute Indians.

Chane and his Indian friends are camping one day, when they are approached by three suspicious looking men, McPherson, Slack and Horn, who ask to be grubstaked on the plea that they lost all their belongings while fording the river. On Chane's promise to help, the strangers remain in camp. But that night, after stealing Chane's weapons, they plot to kill him and steal his and the Indians' horses. But barbed wire. His daring feat suc-Chane has suspected their motives and when the coup is to be sprung, the Indians are well on their way and Chane has escaped in the opposite direction.

McPherson and his men follow in pursuit, but Chane manages to get away by making a spectacular itch loose. plunge on horseback into a swiftly flowing stream. The horse thieves, chief's daughter, and grossly mis- the cliffs in the setting sun.

and joins McPherson and his followers. While their men proceed with the stampede scheme in which a mighty tide of horse flesh is rounded up and driven toward the trap, McPherson, Slack, Horne and Manerube return to camp and overpower Chane and Melberne.

Manerube is shot by McPherson, when he objects to the latter's attentions to Sue, but the three horse thieves are in turn killed by Toddy Nokin, the Indian chief, who thus avenges his daughter.

As the thousands of wild horses come milling into view, Chane leaps on his horse and rides like mad to swerve the stampede and save the thundering tide of horses from rushing headlong into the ceeds, and incidentally, he captures Panguitch. But Sue, moved to pity by the animal that was meant to know no master, pleads with Chane for the horse's free-Chane, sympathizing with dom. the kingly stallion, turns Pangu-

And the picture closes as Sue and Chane embrace, and Panguhowever, capture Sosie, the Indian itch is seen leading his herd up

't decidedly novel not a radical denamic scenes—and to be found in this ever before been amount and Zane for producing a photoplay, which d the picture, has er of cast. No betd-riding, up-standd have been made ally known for his nest actors in filmand Douglas Faired players.

with the capturing wholesale scale, and n exact duplicate of almost unscalable the novel and film the most primitive d in the West.

ADVERTISING—to tell then

FURIOUS fist fights, reckless riding, and a stupendous horse-stampede climax—story for story, punch for punch, thrill for thrill, there isn't a better Western on the screen.

Filmed in the Arizona wild horse country-a new and fascinating background.

Comedy News

Musical

Features

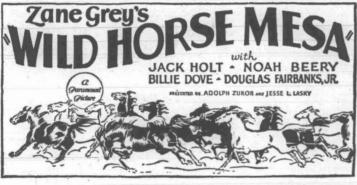

ZANE GREY-Para-mounts are indisputably the class of all Westerns. And "Wild Horse Mesa" is indisputably the class of all Zane Grey-Paramounts.

One-column Press Ad 1A

Directed by Lucien Hubbard-Screen play by George B. Seitz

Two-column Supplementary Press Ad 2ASX

Two-column Supplementary Press Ad 2AS

CATCHY AD CATCHLINES

Where horses know no master, and hearts know the thrill of love-"Wild Horse Mesa."

Horse sense: See "Wild Horse Mesa"!

Wild horses couldn't drag you away from it!

A thousand-horse power story of a thousand smashing scenes.

The story of two brothers fighting for the same girl, and how the capture of a magnificent wild horse settled their rivalry.

Out in the wild horse country, with romance running wild.

Production Mat 1PA

RIALTO

Thunder JACK HOLT a Gard

NOAH BEERY OUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. nount Gicture

Press Ad 1AX One-column

Trailers Bui

ZANE GREY'S Vild Horse Mesa" With

o tell them so you SELL them

ZANE GREY'S Wild Horse Mesa'

SWIFTER and swifter they raced across the wilderness - a pack of fleet-footed wild horsesthe "death trap" aheadand hard-riding outlaws ening them on Then the stampede! and a human life in jeopardy to save them.

Just a sample of the dramatic thunder rumbling all through "Wild Horse Mesa."

JACK HOLT NOAH BEERY BILLIE DOVE DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

Four-column Newspaper Advertisement 4A

RIALTO

The cut on the right shows the

Classy Herald

cover of the 4-page colored herald on "Wild Horse Mesa."

contains punch scenes from the picture and good sales talk.

Back page blank for theatre imprint, etc.

Only $3.00 per 1,000.

Samples at your exchange.

ANE

GREY'S filmed by Paramot nt on the same stupendous as "The Thunde' ing Herd."

JACK HOLT BILLIE DOVEa Gard

NOAH BEERY DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. mount Picture

One-column

Press Ad 1AX

Trailers Build Business!

BE SURE TO GIVE NUMBERS IN ORDER-ING CUTS AND MATS. SEE PRICE LIST ON THE POSTER PAGE.

Ropin' the Thrills!

Two-column Supplementary Press Ad 2AS

ANE GREY-Paramounts are indisputably the class of all Westerns. And "Wild Horse Mesa" is indisputably the class of all Zane Grey-Paramounts.

One-column Press Ad 1A

Production Mat 1PA

RIALTO

GREY'S ANE romancethriller ilmed by Paramot at on the same tupendous scale as "The

JACK HOLT - NOAH BEERY BILLIE DOVE- OUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

One-column Press Ad 1AX

Trailers Buil

You can get an excellent Ser Mesa.

This is 75 eet long and costs after release date. Refund of $1.5 After first 4 months cost is $2.5

Urder (List, Page ·

lates Thundering Herd."

a Garamount Gicture

f shipment.

Vational

ast of branch

S WILD HORS ZANE GREY Two-column P

CATCHY AD CATCHLINES

Where horses know no master, and hearts know the thrill of love-"Wild Horse Mesa."

Horse sense: See "Wild Horse Mesa"!

Wild horses couldn't drag vou away from it!

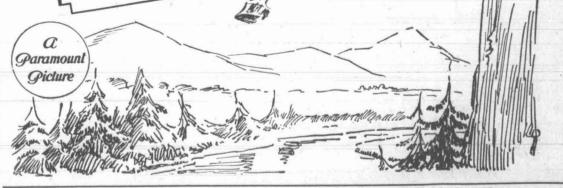

A thousand-horse power story of a thousand smashing scenes.

The story of two brothers fighting for the same girl, and how the capture of a magnificent wild horse settled their rivalry.

Out in the wild horse country, with romance running wild.

Seven roaring reelsspace! and not one punchless scene.

Screen play by Lucien Hubbard-Directed by George B. Seitz-Photographed by Bert Glennon.

Three-column Newspaper Advertisement 3A

ling all through "Wild Horse Mesa."

JACK HOLT NOAH BEERY BILLIE DOVE DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

Four-column Newspaper Advertisement 4A

RIALTO

Classy Herald

The cut on the right shows the cover of the 4-page colored herald on "Wild Horse Mesa."

Inda double made

contains punch scenes from the picture and good sales talk.

Back page blank for theatre imprint, etc.

Only $3.00 per 1,000.

Samples at your exchange.

WID RSE
HORSE
NESA

ANE GREY'S
Tomance-

ZANE GREYS
thriller limed by Paramot same tupendous scale as "The he as Herd."

JACK HOLT - NOAH BEERY BILLIE DOVE-Q GARE PAIRBANKS AL A GARE NOUNT GICTURE

One-column Press Ad 1AX

BE SURE TO GIVE NUMBERS IN ORDER-ING CUTS AND MATS. SEE PRICE LIST ON THE POSTER PAGE.

Trailers Build Business!

You can get an excellent Service Trailer on "Wild Horse Mesa."

This is 75 feet long and costs $5 during the first 4 months after release date. Refund of $1.50 if returned within two weeks.

After first 4 months cost is $2.50. Refund of $1.00 if returned

Urder t National Screen Service, Inc. See Price List, Page of branch offices.

f shipment.

ANE GREY S WILD HORSE MESA" A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

Two-column Production Mat 2P

Ropin' the Thrills!

Wild Horse Mesa"

Two-column Press Advertisement 2A

PUBLICITY—to help you ro

The Real Indian and The Screen Variety

Featured Player in New Zane Grey Film Discovers Many New Things About the Noble Red Man

By Jack Holt

More than a month spent on location in Arizona, during the filming of Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa," convinced me that the real Indian has been vastly misunderstood. I venture to suggest that lying in a motion picture camp next to a Navajo Indian reservation, with hundreds of the tribe taking active part in the photoplay, provides an excellent opportunity to learn something about the red man in his native habitat and likewise of his manner of living.

My greatest distillusionment seems when I learned these

My greatest disillusionment came when I learned that the language spoken by these Indians is not the sign language but rather a spoken language of their own. Practically every member of our company, including Noah Beery, Billie Dove, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and language before going on location, but we might just as well have saved the time and effort.

Our first feeble attempts to converse via signs was not only a failure but also regarded by the red men as an insult. When we stopped making weird motions with our hands and arms we got along better, and before the month was over we began to learn Navajo talk and they picked up quite a bit of English.

In our camp was a doctor furnished by Paramount for the benefit of the players and when the Indians learned that we had a "medicine man" they came from miles around to be treated for real and imaginary ailments. But no matter what their trouble was, they would under no circumstances permit the doctor to use a knife, although they appeared to enjoy the application of salve and bandages.

And I might say in passing that no "Wellength"

And I might say in passing that no "Hollywood vamp" has the Indian sign on the Navajo squaws when it comes to flashing white teeth. Perhaps those who aspire to pearly teeth and spend their hard-earned money with the dental fraternity might discover the secret of those wonderfully white teeth the Navajo women pos-

The Indians have an original method of shaving. The brave, who wishes to remove the hair from his face, simply takes a piece of bent tin, firmly grasps an individual hair, and out it comes. My guess is that they shave often but wash their faces seldom.

The Navajo girls do the courting and also after marriage have divorce privileges. If a husband doesn't behave in a manner to suit his wife she throws him right out of the house and his personal belongings after him.

They have no bungalow courts or apartment houses but live in mud huts which they call "Hogans". When a good Indian dies, they simply seal up the doors and leave him there. That's just about as economical and safe a burial as any I know.

During our first week in camp, we set up a radio and invited the Indian braves to listen in. When those invited the Indian braves to listen in. When those Navajos heard human voices coming out of the little loud speaker, they took it on the run in a body and the next day we had the utmost difficulty in rounding them up for some of the scenes.

became very good friends, pictures and I believe that The players "Wild Horse Mesa" will prove conclusively that as horsemen these same Indians are wonderful riders.

Cameramen Defy Death Filming Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa'

Hail the movie cameramen! Unhonored, unsung heroes of filmdom!

The average picture-goer, who sits midst ease and comfort in a well-ventilated, luxuriously-appointed theatre and watches the silent shadows flit across the silver sheet, little dreams of the dangers and hardships that fall to the lot of "the men who turn the crank". Yet, quite often, the cinema photographers experience greater thrills and have more narrow escapes than were ever flashed upon the screen.

"Wild Horse Mesa" is a case in point. This spectacular Zane Grey melodrama, which opens next Sunday at the Rialto, was filmed almost entirely in the rugged Red Lake section of the Arizona desert. When you see this production you will be amazed at the staggering climax, which shows a tremendous stampede of 5,000 wild horses, charging at breakneck speed towards a treach-erous barbed wire trap, but you will hardly realize the difficulties and hazards connected with the photographing of such a breath-taking scene.

Twelve cameramen were required to film the stampede. Bert Glennon, chief cameraman, stationed his assistants in shallow natural gullies which gave some protection and yet were within exact range of the charging steeds. Glennon himself took the most dangerous and exposed position. He located his camera in a small ravine "shooting" upwards with the entire herd racing high over his head. At times the thundering horses swerved within three feet of his camera, and Glennon was momentarily afraid that some jostling or confusion among the spirited steeds would force one of them off

Like Father, Like Son!

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. proves "Wild Horse Mesa," the new Paramount western melodrama, that he is a chip of the old block!

In this picturization of Zane Grey's widely read novel of the same name, young Fairbanks is given an opportunity to rival his famous dad's athletic ability. He portrays the very important role of "Chess Weymer"—a part that calls for genuine acting and some horse-manship feats for which he trained long and faithfully.

Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Noah Beery share featured honors with Fairbanks in the production. The story has to do with the capturing of wild horses, and is a swift succes sion of pulsating thrills, capped by a stupendous climax, in which several thousand wild steeds are stampeded into a vicious barbed wire trap.

Rialto next Sunday.

Film Player's Ingenuity Solves Location Problem

There is always a man for every emergency whether it be to stop a runaway horse or to save a republic from disaster.

George Irving, veteran character portrayer of stage and screen, proved to be "the man of destiny" during the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's film version of Zane Grey's vivid story of the same name.

For the photographing of the wild horse stampede and other thundering thrills in the picture, a camp was constructed at Red Lake, Arizona, 160 miles from civilization.

Between the location on the mesa, where the wild horses were herded, and the camp was a distance of twelve miles, making direct communication extremely difficult.

Irving devised a heliograph system and by means of the mirror flashes all messages were sent—an innovation which tickled the heart of director George B. Seitz.

"Wild Horse Mesa" has for its theme the wholesale roundup of thousands of wild horses by driving them through a funnel-shaped trap into the narrow end against a barbed wire fence. How the courage and fearlessness of one man prevents a gang of horse thieves and outlaws from carrying this barbarous scheme through is thrillingly depicted.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. handle the principal roles.

Reel Fight in Zane Grey "Meller" Acme of Realism

One fist fight that called for no rehearsing because both actors agreed to "let it go," has just been put on the screen.

During the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa," in which Jack Holt plays the leading role and George Magrill, one of the "heavy" parts, director George B. Seitz was confronted with the necessity of staging a desperate battle between these two players that called for a real knock-down and dragout affair. It is pretty generally reed that the most difficult piece direction is to put on a screen scrap that will have all the semblance of the real thing.

But in this particular instance the director had nothing to worry about. Both players readily agreed not to hold their punches and to waive all defensive rules. Holt is a skilled boxer and loves to "mix it"; Magrill, during the World War, won the light heavyweight championship of the

When the time came for the fight. Magrill told Holt to put everything he had into his swings and depend upon him to block the blows in his own way. This idea was made to order for Holt who did let them go This idea was made to with a vengeance and was still going strong long after director Seitz had ordered "cut."

The net result is one of the most

Jack Holt's Own Ca Rivals Screen

Life Story of Popular Paramou Action, D He Plays in-Full of Thrill Suspense an

JACK HOLT, one of filmdom's grant Rialto screen this week in Zan tern, "Wild Horse Mesa," has hacamera. life as he has experienced before the way aboard the ship, Holt arrived in the A friend had written asking him to Holt got a grub stake, and arrived to fin set out seven thousand fruit trees, wh then started for the cattle country. He a ranger, participating in several big ro interest in a cattle ranch. In time he ment, and one day found himself in San himself and starvation.

A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

Production Mat 1PB

Holt met a friend who got him a jo is to jump ture company. His first assignment was easilt, was ture company. His first assignment we esult, was it a river. He made the jump, and as a rid a film con weeks. But when he came out, he four ded and his ture company.

The popular Paramount actor, who lealism, con before the camera in the interest of lild Horse I greatest thrill during the filming of "Watampede sc tion he participated in the tremendous sand fear-crazed wild horses are thunder endangering the lives of all in their path y Lucien H

"Wild Horse Mesa" was adapted by which has Grey novel of the same name. The stor was direct ing of wild horses on a wholesale scale ery, Billie I Besides Holt, the cast includes Noah Bebanks, Jr. as the featured players.

Newspaper Re

(Review No. 1)

A N involuntary chorus of "ohs" and "ahs" and "oohs" punctuated the Rialto atmosphere last night during the initial unfolding of "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's celluloid version of Zane Grey's latest novel.

That this spontaneous tribute to the merits of the photoplay was well deserved, is attested to by the fact that all over the country, wherever this spectacular production has been shown, it has been hailed as a melodramatic thriller of the first water.

Zane Grey is without a peer when it comes to devising dynamic plots that vibrate with red-blooded action, unique thrills and appealing romance, and in "Wild Horse Mesa," his supreme best.

The story, which Lucien Hubbard adapted to the screen, depicts in gripping manner the barbarous scheme of a gang of horse thieves and outlaws to capture several thousand wild horses by stampeding them into a barbed wire trap. Under the shrewd and intelligent direction of George B. Seitz, this theme is developed and embroidered with an assortment of such tremendous climaxes as to chill the blood of the most hardened picture-goer. The final thunt Film Act

Grey's late

ous Virginia later at co anie a civil er cat of the pior ite duation and gr gon. The fut or oush on to A to favored settl ion Holt decided So of a coin, a this day sions.

ment shop, During the followed his mining cla kked mail lighted for-d did simil an rk. wc He staked or ims for hin cla k was not the ided to "go de the United en on to M re his décisi flipped a co back to Se ous voyage roke" compa ie States.

go to work ich gave hi undups. La sold this, n Francisco

At that point his real adventures en has risked h ed across the (Re

VILD H mount' Zane Grey me name, o ght, and eeted it w ne cheers we roism and t against t e hisses we 01 thays the role ade him pular "bad This latest hors has hors has a horills and ma th fact, it is Inst-action, me fa The plot ce d capture of arrees, and de horprising sit su pected and exightiest scen m 5,000 wild of of which ne George B. cture from tion, deserv tale back for the has handle lp your round up your patrons

olt's Own Career ivals Screen Exploits

as many adventures in real

Born in Virginia, educated at the nous Virginia Military Academy fanous Virginia Military Academy and later at college, where he became a civil engineer, he felt the itch of the pioneer spirit after his graduation and with a chum went to Oregon. The future film star wanted to push on to Alaska. His companion favored settling down in Oregon.

So Holt decided the question by a flit of a coin, a habit which he has his day for making momen-

'sions. The coin favored and for six years he tramped and frozen trails of "the ment shop," as the great Northst is sometimes called.

During the brief summer months followed his profession of survey-mining claims. In the winter he kked mail for the government, ighted for the road commission, did similar odds and ends of

He staked out and worked several ims for himself, but the god of k was not with him. Finally, he ided to "go outside" as returning the United States is called, and en on to Mexico. Just to make his design was the right over

e his decision was the right one flipped a coin—and it told him to back to Seattle. After an adven-ous voyage in which he aided a roke" companion in smuggling his go to work on a ranch in Oregon.

Id it was a fruit ranch. He helped ich gave him another stake, and rode the range as a cowboy and undups. Later he acquired a half sold this, made an unwise invest-

Francisco with only $25 between e States.

opular Paramou it Film Actor Like Pictures Plays in-Full of Action, Drama, Suspense and Thrill

one of filmdom's greatest favorites, who is on the n this week in Zane Grey's latest Paramount wesrse Mesa," has had perienced before the camera.

hip, Holt arrived in written asking him to take, and arrived to fousand fruit trees, where cattle country. ousand fruit trees, withe cattle country. He ating in several big rule ranch. In time he by found himself in Sa vation.

liend who got him a job as a "double" with a motion pictis first assignment was to jump a horse off a cliff into the paramount, he fould his real adventures of the paramount actor, who has risked his life dozens of times rain the interest of the paramount actor, who has risked his life dozens of times rain the filming of "valid Horse Mesa." In this producted in the tremendous wild horses are thundered across the great Arizona plateau, lives of all in their pat. wild norses are thunds, lives of all in their pat-Mesa" was adapted by same name. The stor-es on a wholesale scale cast includes Noah Be featured players.

, which has to do with the captur-was directed by George B. Seitz. ry, Billie Dove and Douglas Fair-

rspaper Reviews

No. 1)

chorus of "ohs" d "oohs" punctunosphere last night unfolding of "Wild celluloid rey's latest novel. aneous tribute to country, wherever roduction has been hailed as a melo-of the first water. ithout a peer when ing dynamic plots red-blooded action, appealing romance, rse Mesa," he is at ch Lucien Hubbard ch Lucien Hubbard screen, depicts in the barbarous barbarous the g of horse thieves pture several thouby stampeding them e trap. Under the ligent direction of his theme is develered with an assortiendous climaxes as of the most hard-The final thun-

All dressed up in a bathing suit and no place to swim!

What's in a Name?

That's what happened to Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., featured members of the "Wild Horse Mesa" company when they arrived on location at Red Lake, Arizona.

Prior to leaving Hollywood, some one advanced the tip that the heat of the Arizona desert would be overcome, in part at least, by a daily dip in Red

But when the hopeful players, headed by director George B. Seitz, arrived, they soon found out that Red Lake was as free from water as a billiard ball is devoid of hair. Red Lake was just a bed of dry, hot

Moral: When Shakespeare queried rhetorically a few hundred years ago, "What's in a name?", he said

Film Folk Fooled When "Hogan" Proves to Be-

"Has anybody here seen Hogan?" That was the question Jack Holt, Billie Dove, Noah Beery and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. asked each other and every one else soon after their arrival in the wild horse country at Red Lake, Arizona, where they had gone to make the new Paramount western, "Wild Horse Mesa," adapted from the Zane Grey novel of the same name.

Close by the camp had been established the Navajo Indian reservation and practically every member of the tribe was used in filming the picture. Being in a strange country, it was but natural for the players to ask questions of the Indians, and in almost every instance the only intelli-gible reply they got was "Hogan."

Jack Holt finally solved the mystery. The name "Hogan" is given to the mud huts in which the red men live, and has nothing to do with the famed Hogan of song and story. Incidentally, the noted Paramount actor discovered that when a Navajo Indian dies, his relations just leave him in the "Hogan," seal up the door, and trust that he will rest in

"Wild Horse Mesa" is a stirring action-romance-drama, in which an attempt is made to round up several thousand wild horses by driving them into a treacherous barbed wire trap. The stampede of the wild steeds is the climactic high spot in the production. George B. Seitz directed the

Indians Far From Stolid Avers Paramount Director

Nobody can tell George B. Seitz, Paramount director, that Navajo In-dians are stolid and quiet.

The popular impression, that the red man is of an unemotional, phleg-matic disposition, given only to gut-tural sounds when he wishes to speak and maintaining a poker face during all his waking moments, is all wrong, according to Seitz.

He desires to affirm, swear and take oath that never in all his experience as a megaphone wielder did he see more excitement than was furnished by 350 Navajo Indians during the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa, the new Zane Grey melodrama, i which Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. are the featured players.

The red men were secured from the Navajo reservation through the courtesy of ten Indian post traders Each trader volunteered to obtain the services of thirty-five Indians who would agree to become motion picture actors for a certain number of days at a certain amount per day. The traders did their work well, so that on the appointed day the Indians appeared before Seitz ready for among the red men where peace and among the red men where peace and among the red men where peace and resembled an Indian war dance.

Stampede Climax in Zane Grey Thriller

Players and Cameramen Risk Lives Filming Mad Rush of 5,000 Wild Horses for "Wild Horse Mesa"

FILM fans, you who rave about the sensational pictures you have seen, you who have witnessed the screen's mightiest thrills, you who have enjoyed the dynamic action of epic westerns,—see "Wild Horse Mesa" at the Rialto and you'll have something to brag about!

For stupendous action, for spectacular thrills and for the most gasp-provoking climax ever flashed on the silver sheet, this Paramount melodrama, which George B. Seitz produced from Lucien Hubbard's adaptation of Zane Grey's gripping novel, has them all beat!

Imagine a tremendous herd of five thousand terrorstricken wild horses charging at top speed across a vast stretch of tableland, headed straight for a treacherous barbed wire corral! This stampede—the final, smashing highspot in the photoplay—is pictured in all, its terrifying realism, and was filmed at great personal risk to cameramen and players, many of whom narrowly escaped death from the thundering hoofs of the wild

And this scene comes as a fitting and high-powered finale to a series of tense, dramatic events which have their beginning when Jack Holt, hero of the picture, comes into open and bitter conflict with a gang of outlaws and horse thieves, captained by Noah Beery. Billie Dove is the lovely heroine and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., portrays the fourth featured role, that of Holt's-daredevil younger brother.

Just to prove that the story does depart from the regulation western plot formula, it is only necessary to point out that although several hundred Indians play a stirring part in the film, they are on Holt's side and prove of invaluable assistance at a very crucial moment.

The rugged and magnificent wilderness backgrounds are not the least of the photoplay's worth-while features. All of the exteriors were photographed at Red Lake, Arizona, where was found an almost unbelievable dupli-cate of The Wild Horse Mesa—the actual locale of the story-with thousands of wild horses inhabiting the

"Wild Horse Mesa" represents the ultimate in melodrama. It is entertainment plus!

Superstitious Belief Solves Red Men's Mother-in-Law Problem

Never look your son-in-law in the face or you will be stricken blind!

That's the Navajo Indian belief which serves to keep a modicum of peace in the family, and solves the red man's mother-in-law problem. This superstitious Indian conviction—which might profitably be adopted by the pale-face white races—was learned when the Paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location at Red Lake, Arizona, close by the Navajo Indian reservation at that point.

One of the important episodes in the production called for three hundred Indians, and director George B. Seitz was about ready to "shoot" when he discovered an Indian squaw in the foreground who per sisted in keeping her face covered.

As it was a scene requiring interest if not ag on the part of all within range of the camera, Sein sent word to the squaw to take the cloth from her face. This she refused to do, and an interpreter was sent fer.

He reported that the woman's son-in-law was in direct line of her vision and she feared to look at him, believing she would be struck blind if she did. The interpreter further convisced the director for terpreter further convinced the director that it was a time-honored belief, and a change of vision was given her. "Wild Horse Mesa" revolves around the attempt of a gang of horse thieves to capture several thousand wild horses by stampeding them into a treacherous barbed wire trap. Whirlwind action is the thrilling keynote of the photoplay, which winds up with one of the most awe-inspiring climaxes ever flashed on the screen—the mad stampede of thousands of wild steeds.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are featured at the head of a powerful cast including hundreds of players, each a distinct type for comedy relief or picturesque atmosphere.

Zane Grey Film Recalls Brutal Methods of Wild Horse Hunting

The announcement, that the Rialto Theatre will show "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's spectacular picturiza-tion of Zane Grey's melodramatic novel of the same name, is of especial interest at this time, in view of the agitation that has arisen in many western states for the legal destruction of the thousands of wild horses that are roaming the great open spaces.

Mr. Grey, in his story, protests the cruelty and reck-lessness which was practiced in the olden days by wild horse hunters. And the picture graphically and thrillingly depicts the barbarous attempt of a gang of horse thieves and outlaws to round up several thousand un-tamed steeds by stampeding them into a vicious barbed wire trap.

But while severely condemning such brutal methods.

Lucien Hubbard from the Zane

(Review No. 2)

VILD HORSE MESA," Paramount's stirring picturization Zane Grey's spirited story of the me name, opened at the Rialto last ght, and a first night audience eeted it with cheers and hisses. he cheers were for Jack Holt, whose roism and daredeviltry finally win photoplay was well he roism and daredeviltry finally win ted to by the fact out against tremendous odds, while e hisses went to Noah Beery who ays the role of outlaw with all the pl ays the role of outlaw with all the llainous polish and dash that has m de him one of the screen's most polish and men."

This latest contender for photoplay nors has all the old Zane Grey rills and many that are brand new fact, it is quite the last word in st-action, melodramatic westerns! The plot centers about the pursuit d capture of several thousand wild rses, and develops an abundance of rprising situations and many un-pected and startling climaxes. The ightiest scene of all is the stampede 5,000 wild stallions—a scene, the of which the silver sheet has er seen. George B. Seitz, who produced the ture from Lucien Hubbard's adapdeserves an especial pat on back for the manner in which In our camp was a doctor furnished by Paramount for the benefit of the players and when the Indians learned that we had a "medicine man" they came from miles around to be treated for real and imaginary allments. But no matter what their trouble was, they would under no circumstances permit the doctor to use a knife, although they appeared to enjoy the application of salve and handses. tion of salve and bandages.

And I might say in passing that no "Hollywood vamp" has the Indian sign on the Navajo squaws when it comes to flashing white teeth. Perhaps those who aspire to pearly teeth and spend their hard-earned money with the dental fraternity might discover the secret of those wonderfully white teeth the Navajo women pos-

The Indians have an original method of shaving. The brave, who wishes to remove the hair from his face, simply takes a piece of bent tin, firmly grasps an individual hair, and out it comes. My guess is that they shave often but wash their faces seldom

The Navajo girls do the courting and also after marriage have divorce privileges. If a husband doesn't behave in a manner to suit his wife she throws him right out of the house and his personal belongings after him.

They have no bungalow courts or apartment houses but live in mud huts which they call "Hogans". When a good Indian dies, they simply seal up the doors and leave him there. That's just about as economical and safe a burial as any I know.

During our first week in camp, we set up a radio and invited the Indian braves to listen in. When those Navajos heard human voices coming out of the little loud speaker, they took it on the run in a body and the next day we had the utmost difficulty in rounding them p for some of the scenes.

The players became very good friends, pictures and I believe that "Wild Horse Mesa" will prove concusively that as horsemen these same Indians are wonderful riders.

Cameramen Defy Death Filming Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa"

Hail the movie cameramen! Unhonored, unsung heroes of filmdom!

The average picture-goer, who sits midst ease and the average picture-goer, who sits must ease and comfort in a well-ventilated, luxuriously-appointed theatre and watches the silent shadows flit across the silver sheet, little dreams of the dangers and hardships that fall to the lot of "the men who turn the crank". Yet, quite often, the cinema photographers experience greater thrills and have more narrow escapes than were ever fleshed upon the screen. flashed upon the screen.

"Wild Horse Mesa" is a case in point. This spectacular Zane Grey melodrama, which opens next Sunday at the Malto, was filmed almost entirely in the rugged Red Lake section of the Arizona desert. When you see this production you will be amazed at the staggering climax, which shows a tremendous stampede of 5,000 wild horses, charging at breakneck speed towards a treacherous barbed wire trap, but you will hardly realize the difficulties and hazards connected with the photographing of such a breath-taking scene.

Twelve cameramen were required to film the stampede. Bert Glennon, chief cameraman, stationed his assistants in shallow natural gullies which gave some protection and yet were within exact range of the charg-ing steeds. Glennon himself took the most dangerous and exposed position. He located his camera in a small ravine "shooting" upwards with the entire herd racing high over his head. At times the thundering horses swerved within three feet of his camera, and Glennon was momentarily afraid that some jostling or confusion among the spirited steeds would force one of them off the edge and on top of him. But he never stopped grinding!

Fortunately, no casualties resulted, and mightiest episodes ever caught by a camera was successed that the filling realism. Fortunately, no casualties resulted, and one of the fully screened in all its thrilling realism.

In "Wild Horse Mesa" Zane Grey has evolved a unique that inhabit various sections of the American wilderness. George B. Seitz directed the photoplay, which features such prominent players as Jack Holt, Noah Bee-ry, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Indians Invoke Aid of "Sun God" for Wild Horse Charge

The Navajo Indians who rounded up the five thousand horses for the "Wild Horse Mesa" stampede during the filming of that Zane Grey production at Red Lake, Arizona, entered into the spirit of the scene as though it were a tribal event.

So wild were the steeds and so fleet of foot, that the red men performed a special tribal ceremony in order to make their work of handling the tremendous herd

Capturing a strange bird that happened to fly into one of their "Hogans", as they call their adobe huts, they took it to the Indian chief. While the band stood around, the chief gently plucked seven feathers from the neck, wings, back, breast, and two from the long spreing tail of the bird, which was then released.

The "medicine man" then took some powdered herbs from his bag and mixed them with the feathers until they were covered with vegetable dust. The Indian braves, in the meanwhile, squatted in a circle, muttering weird incantations.

After that, the feathers were thrown to the winds, with a prayer to the "sun god", who is supposed to protect birds, that he would send some of the endurance and speed of the bird to the ponies belonging to the tribe when they participated in the stampede.

This picturesque ceremony was described to Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., featured players in the picture, by the wife of the Indian trading post keeper, who was the only white person to witness it.

emergency whether it be to stop runaway horse or to save a republic from disaster.

George Irving, veteran character portrayer of stage and screen, proved to be "the man of destiny" during the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's film version of Zane Grey's vivid story of the same name.

For the photographing of the wild horse stampede and other thundering thrills in the picture, a camp was constructed at Red Lake, Arizona, 160 miles from civilization.

Between the location on the mesa, where the wild horses were herded, and the camp was a distance of twelve miles, making direct communication extremely difficult.

Irving devised a heliograph system and by means of the mirror flashes all messages were sent—an innovation which tickled the heart of director George B. Seitz.

"Wild Horse Mesa" has for its theme the wholesele rounder of theme the wholesale roundup of thousands of wild horses by driving them through a funnel-shaped trap into the narrow end against a barbed wire fence. How the courage and fearlessness of one man prevents a gang of horse thieves and outlaws from carrying this barbarous scheme through is thrillingly depicted.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. handle the principal roles.

Reel Fight in Zane Grey "Meller" Acme of Realism

One fist fight that called for no rehearsing because both actors agreed to "let it go," has just been put on the screen.

During the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa," in which Jack Holt plays the leading role and George Magrill, one of the "heavy" parts, director George B. Seitz was confronted with the necessity of staring a desperate bettle cessity of staging a desperate battle between these two players that called for a real knock-down and drag-out affair. It is pretty generally agreed that the most difficult piece of direction is to put on a screen scrap that will have all the semblance of the real thing of the real thing.

But in this particular instance the director had nothing to worry about. Both players readily agreed not to hold their punches and to waive all defensive rules. Holt is a skilled boxer and loves to "mix it"; Magrill, during the World War, won the light heavyweight championship of the

When the time came for the fight, Magrill told Holt to put everything he had into his swings and depend upon him to block the blows in his own way. This idea was made to order for Holt who did let them go with a vengeance and was still going strong long after director Seitz had ordered "cut."

The net result is one of the most terrific film fights ever made—just one of the many high spots in a picture chockful of thrills. A mad stampede of five thousand wild horses is the spectacular climax in this picturization of Zane Grey's latest story.

Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Doug-las Fairbanks, Jr. are the other play-ers who are featured with Holt in the production.

Lo, the Poor Indian! Has Drink for Thirsty

A Navajo Indian, lost on the desert, would sooner have a pound can of tomatoes for quenching his thirst than a gallon of-water!

When the Paramount company making "Wild Horse Mesa" was on location at Red Lake, Arizona, close by the Navajo reservation, the red men, young and old, were highly elated when they learned the camp cooks had a goodly store of canned tomatoes on hand.

Any favor, great or small, the Indians would grant in return for a can of tomatoes. They insisted that the juice of the tomato was the most effective thirst quencher known.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., featured players in this new Zane Grey western melodrama, which George B. Seitz directed, were inclined to be skeptical, but after testing the theory couple of times they admitted that couple of times, they admitted that the Navajos were absolutely right.

"Wild Horse Mesa" depicts in gripping manner the attempt of a gang of horse thieves to capture several thousand wild horses. A tremendous stampede of the wild stallions is one of the many spectacular thrills in the production.

JACK HOLT IN ZANE GREY'S "WILD HORSE MESA" A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

Production Mat 1PB

way aboard the ship, Holt arrived in th A friend had written asking him to Holt got a grub stake, and arrived to fit set out seven thousand fruit trees, wh then started for the cattle country. He a ranger, participating in several big rounterest in a cattle ranch. In time he ment, and one day found himself in Sar himself and starvation.

Holt met a friend who got him a joint recompany. His first assignment we ture company. His first assignment was a river. He made the jump, and as a r weeks. But when he came out, he four At that point his real adventures en The popular Paramount actor, who before the camera in the interest of a greatest thrill during the filming of "the tion he participated in the tremendous and four greated wild horses are thunder sand fear-crazed wild horses are thunder endangering the lives of all in their path "Wild Horse Mesa" was adapted b

Grey novel of the same name. ing of wild horses on a wholesale scale Besides Holt, the cast includes Noah Bo banks, Jr. as the featured players.

Newspaper Rev

(Review No. 1)

A N involuntary chorus of "ohs" and "ahs" and "oohs" punctuated the Rialto atmosphere last night during the initial unfolding of "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's celluloid version of Zane Grey's latest novel.

That this spontaneous tribute to the merits of the photoplay was well deserved, is attested to by the fact that all over the country, wherever this spectacular production has been shown, it has been hailed as a melodramatic thriller of the first water.

Zane Grey is without a peer when that vibrate with red-blooded action, unique thrills and appealing romance, and in "Wild Horse Mesa," he is at his supreme best.

The story, which Lucien Hubbard adapted to the screen, depicts in gripping manner the barbarous scheme of a gang of horse thieves and outlaws to capture several thousand wild horses by stampeding them into a barbed wire trap. Under the shrewd and intelligent direction of George B. Seitz, this theme is developed and embroidered with an assortment of such tremendous climaxes as to chill the blood of the most hard-ened picture-goer. The final thun-dering thrill, showing the terrific charge of the wild steeds, is, in it-self, worth several times the price self, worth several times the price of admission.

Jack Holt, who portrays the leaving role, covers himself with dramatic slory, and gives a superb exhibition of horsemanship skill. Noah Bhandles the "bad man" part with hausual finesse; Billie Dove, charming and lovely, furnishes the love interest; and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. wins news laurels with his characterization.

Screenites Learn Why Indians Are "Nurmis"

The mystery as to why the Indian is a great runner was satisfactorily explained to Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who spent more than a month at Red Lake, Arizona, filming Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa," under the direction of George B. Seitz.

The Paramount camp was close by the Navajo Indian reservation and during a rodeo that was staged, the Navajo bucks easily outran such excellent athletes as Holt, young Fairbanks and George Magrill.

Harvey K. Meyer, the Indian agent at the Navajo reservation, pointed out the reason for the red men's proficiency and skill in foot racing.

"For ages, the Indian has devel-oped speed through forced training," said Meyer. "In other words, Indian ponies running away and the Indian boys chasing them have served to develop the speed and endurance characteristic of the red man.'

However, aspirants for fame via the "Nurmi" route will find this inroute will find this information of doubtful value, as traffic conditions in most cities preclude the possibility of emulating the example of the red man!

He staked out ims for hims was not wi ided to "go the United en on to Mer e his décision flipped a coin back to Seat th ous voyage i did similar

e States. go to work o ich gave him rode the rai undups. Late sold this, ma Francisco w s to jump a esult, was in id a film cont has risked hi realism, confe fild Horse Me stampede scer ed across the

Lucien Hul which has was directed ry, Billie Do

(Revie

/ILD HOR

mount's

Zane Grey's me name, open ght, and a fi eeted it with he cheers were roism and dar t against treme hisses went ays the role of vi llainous polish m de him one o pe pular "bad me This latest cont nors has all th rills and many fact, it is qui st-action, meloc The plot center d capture of se rses, and develo rprising situati pected and star

5,000 wild stal ne er seen. George B. Seitz cture from Luci tion, deserves a has handled naged to main tht up to the ve m. The picture magnificent ou

gged setti

ghtiest scene o

acti uglas honors itured ery, give an expenselves, and admirably effe

garets Key Man's H

Say it with lt's advice to a make friends w od Indian.

od Indian. After a month's zona, for the f ne Grey film, ing which time tunity to famil portunity to family sin ce the motion close by the Nava tunned with the that a package of cig arets is the key he art.

'A cigaret will a a dead on,," gh. "And once k of smokes a e one, you are h ncidentally, Hol nor none of the mediu nufacturers read the result is the ticular about the y are offered. To a cigaret even i long as it's a s hip, Holt arrived in to written asking him to take, and arrived to f ake, and arrived to it busand fruit trees, whe cattle country. Hating in several big reranch. In time hey found himself in Santien. ation.

ZANE GREY'S SE MESA' NT PICTURE

Mat 1PB

ed in the tremendous stampede scene in which five thou-wild horses are thundered across the great Arizona plateau, ives of all in their pat.

Mesa" was adapted by Lucien Hubbard from the Zane same name. The stores on a wholesale scale cast includes Noah B

spaper Reviews

No. 1)

chorus of "ohs" ad "oohs" punctuosphere last night infolding of "Wild amount's celluloid rey's latest novel. aneous tribute to aneous tribute to TI hotoplay was well he ed to by the fact country, wherever the duction has been hailed as a melof the first water. hout a peer when ng dynamic plots ed-blooded action, appealing romance, se Mesa," he is at Lucien Hubbard creen, depicts in barbarous of horse thieves ture several thoustampeding them Under the trap. Under the gent direction of is theme is develed with an assortndous climaxes as of the most hard-The final thunwing the terrific I steeds, is, in it-I times the price portrays the lead self with dramatic superb exhibition kill. Noan B e Dove, charming Douglas s the love interairbanks, Jr. wins his characteriza-

rn Why Are "Nurmis"

to why the Indian was satisfactorily Holt, Noah Beery, ouglas Fairbanks, than a month at filming Zane Mesa," under the B. Seitz.

camp was close by reservation and was staged, the outran such ex-Magrill.

, the Indian agent ervation, pointed the red men's profoot racing. Indian has develforced training, her words, Indian ay and the Indian have served to ded endurance char-d man." nts for fame via will find this inful value, as trafost cities preclude emulating the ex-nted for the road commission, did similar odds and ends of

He staked out and worked several ims for himself, but the god of k was not with him. Finally, he ided to "go outside" as returning the United States is called, and n on to Mexico. Just to make e his decision was the right one, flipped a coin—and it told him to back to Seattle. After an adven-ous voyage in which he aided a roke" companion in smuggling his e States.

go to work on a ranch in Oregon.
Id it was a fruit ranch. He helped Ich gave him another stake, and rode the range as a cowboy and undups. Later he acquired a half sold this, made an unwise investFrancisco with only $25 between ation.

end who got him a jo
lis first assignment w e the jump, and as a
he came out, he fou
his real adventures e Paramount actor, who a in the interest of ring the filming of "
ed in the tremendous atampede scene in which five thou-

, which has to do with the captur-was directed by George B. Seitz. ry, Billie Dove and Douglas Fair-

(Review No. 2)

TILD HORSE MESA," Para-

Zane Grey's spirited story of the me name, opened at the Rialto last ght, and a first night audience eeted it with cheers and hisses. he cheers were for Jack Holt, whose roism and daredeviltry finally win

it against tremendous odds, while e hisses went to Noah Beery who

This latest contender for photoplay nors has all the old Zane Grey rills and many that are brand new.

fact, it is quite the last word in st-action, melodramatic westerns!

The plot centers about the pursuit

d capture of several thousand wild rses, and develops an abundance of rprising situations and many un-pected and startling climaxes. The ghtiest scene of all is the stampede 5,000 wild stallions—a scene, the of which the silver sheet has George B. Seitz, who produced the cture from Lucien Hubbard's adap-deserves an especial pat

acting, Billie Dove and honors with Holt and give an excellent account of mselves, and the minor players admirably effective.

er seen.

tured

of lases went to Noan Beery who ays the role of outlaw with all the vi liainous polish and dash that has me de him one of the screen's most pullar "bad men."

mount's stirring picturization

Billie Dove, Noah Beery and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. asked each other and every one else soon after their ar-rival in the wild horse country at Red Lake, Arizona, where they had gone to make the new Paramount western, "Wild Horse Mesa," adapted from the Zane Grey novel of the same name.

Close by the camp had been established the Navajo Indian reservation and practically every member of the tribe was used in filming the picture Being in a strange country, it was but natural for the players to ask questions of the Indians, and in almost every instance the only intelligible reply they got was "Hogan."

Jack Holt finally solved the mys-ry. The name "Hogan" is given to the mud huts in which the red men live, and has nothing to do with the famed Hogan of song and story. Incidentally, the noted Paramount actor discovered that when a Navajo Indian dies, his relations just leave him in the "Hogan," seal up the door, and trust that he will rest in

"Wild Horse Mesa" is a stirring action-romance-drama, in which an attempt is made to round up several thousand wild horses by driving them into a treacherous barbed wire trap. The stampede of the wild steeds is the climactic high spot in the produc-tion. George B. Seitz directed the red man is of an unemotional, phlegmatic disposition, given only to gut-tural sounds when he wishes to speak and maintaining a poker face during all his waking moments, is all wrong according to Seitz.

Indians Far From Stolid

He desires to affirm, swear and take oath that never in all his experience as a megaphone wielder did he see more excitement than was furne see more excitement than was furnished by 350 Navajo Indians during the filming of "Wild Horse Mesa," the new Zane Grey melodrama, in which Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. are the featured players.

The red men were secured from Navajo reservation through the courtesy of ten Indian post traders. Each trader volunteered to obtain the services of thirty-five Indians who would agree to become motion pic-ture actors for a certain number of days at a certain amount per day. The traders did their work well, so that on the appointed day the Indians appeared before Seitz ready for work.

Just about fifteen minutes later, uproar and confusion prevailed among the red men where peace and quiet had reigned before. resembled an Indian war dance. It was some time before Seitz found out what the trouble was. He then learned that, through a misunder-standing, each of the traders had promised a different remuneration to matter out through an interpreter, but the Navajos came at him with conversation too quick and fast. Things looked hopeless, but at that point Harvey K. Meyer, Indian agent, providentially appeared and succeeded in pacifying the red men on the promise that they would all get equal compensation.

"Wild Horse Mesa" centers about the attempt to capture several thou-sand wild horses. The intensely The intensely dramatic events lead up to a stupendous stampede in which the wild steeds are driven into a vicious barb-it with cigarets" is Jack Helt's advice to all those who yearn to make friends with the little understood Indian.

Ggarets Key to Red Man's Heart Says Holt

After a month's stay at Red Lake, Ar zona, for the filming of the new Zane Grey film, "Wild Horse Mesa," duting which time he had ample opthe likes and dislikes of the red men, tunity to familiarize himself with since the motion picture camp was close by the Navajo Indian reservation, the noted Paramount actor re-turned with the positive statement that a package of most any kind of cigarets is the key to the red man's

'A cigaret will awaken any Indian but a dead on," said Holt with a laigh. "And once you haul out a pack of smokes and let an Indian tale one, you are his friend for life." incidentally, Holf pointed out that note of the mediums that carry the national advertising of the cigaret manufacturers reach the red men, and the result is the Indians are not paticular about the brand of cigarets they are offered. They'd walk a mile for a cigaret even if it isn't toasted! long as it's a smoke, it satisfies!

Avers Paramount Director

Nobody can tell George B. Seitz, Paramount director, that Navajo Indians are stolid and quiet.

The popular impression, that the tion, deserves an especial pat on e back for the manner in which has handled the story. He has inaged to maintain the suspense tht up to the very last few feet of m. The picture has the advantage magnificent outdoor backgrounds are ged settings, having been whed midst the scenic granthe Indians he picked. The director tried to straighten the ed wire trap.

"Jumping Jack" Holt

jump and come out whole!"
That is the announced ambition of Jack Holt, who is one of the featured players in Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa," which was recently produced for Paramount by George B. Seitz.

For one of the dramatic episodes in the production, the popular actor jumped his horse off a 50 foot cliff.

The horse was not hurt, but Holt was laid up for three days.

At that he figures that his hospital time is improving, for his debut in the films was by a similar jump off a cliff which resulted in two cracked ribs and necessitated a month's stay in the hospital. Since then, he has made many dangerous leaps, but never without sustaining some minor injury.

devil younger brother.

Just to prove that the story does depart from the regulation western plot formula, it is only necessary to point out that although several hundred Indians play a stirring part in the film, they are on Holt's side and prove of invaluable assistance at a very crucial moment.

The rugged and magnificent wilderness backgrounds are not the least of the photoplay's worth-while features. All of the exteriors were photographed at Red Lake, Arizona, where was found an almost unbelievable duplicate of The Wild Horse Mesa—the actual locale of the story—with thousands of wild horses inhabiting the

"Wild Horse Mesa" represents the ultimate in melodrama. It is entertainment plus!

Superstitious Belief Solves Red Men's Mother-in-Law Problem

Never look your son-in-law in the face or you will

That's the Navajo Indian belief which serves to keep a modicum of peace in the family, and solves the red man's mother-in-law problem. This superstitious Indian conviction—which might profitably be adopted by the pale-face white races—was learned when the Paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on locations and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on locations and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on locations and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location to the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location to the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location to the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location to the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama, "Wild Horse Mesa", was on location to the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey's virile western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey western melodrama and the paramount company engaged in filming Zane Grey western melodrama engaged in filming Zane Grey western tion at Red Lake, Arizona, close by the Navajo Indian reservation at that point.

One of the important episodes in the production called for three hundred Indians, and director George B. Seitz was about ready to "shoot" when he discovered an Indian squaw in the foreground who per sisted in keeping her face covered.

As it was a scene requiring interest if not as on the part of all within range of the camera, Seit sent word to the squaw to take the cloth from her face. This she refused to do, and an interpreter was sent for.

He reported that the woman's son-in-law was in direct line of her vision and she feared to look at him, be-lieving she would be struck blind if she did. The interpreter further convinced the director that it was a time-honored belief, and a change of vision was given

"Wild Horse Mesa" revolves around the attempt of a gang of horse thieves to capture several thousand wild horses by stampeding them into a treacherous barbed wire trap. Whirlwind action is the thrilling keynote of the photoplay, which winds up with one of the most awe-inspiring climaxes ever flashed on the screen—the mad stampede of thousands of wild steeds.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are featured at the head of a powerful cast including hundreds of players, each a distinct type for comedy relief or picturesque atmosphere.

Zane Grey Film Recalls Brutal Methods of Wild Horse Hunting

The announcement, that the Rialto Theatre will show "Wild Horse Mesa," Paramount's spectacular picturization of Zane Grey's melodramatic novel of the same name, is of especial interest at this time, in view of the agitation that has arisen in many western states for the legal destruction of the thousands of wild horses that are roaming the great open spaces.

Mr. Grey, in his story, protests the cruelty and recklessness which was practiced in the olden days by wild horse hunters. And the picture graphically and thrillingly depicts the barbarous attempt of a gang of horse thieves and outlaws to round up several thousand untamed steeds by stampeding them into a vicious barbed wire trap.

But while severely condemning such brutal methods, the folks in many of our far western states today point out that the wild horses have become such a menace to property that there is immediate need of rounding them up in some humane way and either taming them or executing them.

islature, sealing the death warrant of some 400,000 of its fierce free horses, throws into sharp relief the fact that civilization has no use for wild horses. These roaming, untamed stallions have been destroying crops worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, breaking down forces, downstring forms and mischioveners. down fences, devastating farms and mischievously enticing their domesticated brothers of the plow and saddle to steal away with them to share their gypsy-like wanderings. Therefore, they are to be captured, and all not legally claimed by some owner are to be duly exe-

This wild horse problem isn't new. It began back in 1541 when the romantic Spaniards made their conquest of what is now New Mexico. They, of course, brought their horses with them. And surprising though it may be, the western cow-pony, notwithstanding his square-looking neck and head, is the direct lineal descendant of the Arabian steeds first brought into old Mexico by Cortez and his adventurous followers.

Makes Perilous Leap

These horses, whose beautiful and fleet forbears were roaming at will centuries ago in the grassy uplands and deserts of the Near East and North Africa, take natural-"Some day I am going to make jump and come out whole!"

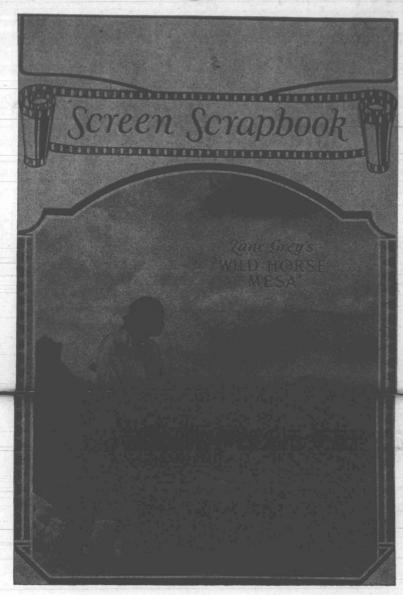

That is the announced ambition of On the plains and ness of goats.

But the problem of catching them has always been a tough one. Unlike the buffalo, the wild horses did not travel in great herds, but went about in small droves, so that it was impossible to round them up on a whole-sale scale. Those caught were just as hard to break. Indeed, we get the word "bronco" from the Spanish meaning "unbreakable."

However, now that they have proved such a serious nuisance that civilization has declared war on them, some effective method for gathering them in will undoubtedly be found.

In connection with Zane Grey's production, it may be of interest to mention that "Wild Horse Mesa" was filmed entirely in the wild horse country of Arizona. George B. Seitz produced it from Lucien Hubbard's adaptation and Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are the featured players.

Four-Page Roto Magazine

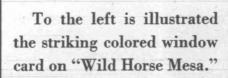

To the left is illustrated the cover of the four-page Roto Magazine on this production. Actual size is 11 x 17 inches.

If you haven't yet used Paramount Roto Magazines, here's the place to start. Ask your local Ad Sales Manager to tell you about their wonderful exploitation possibilities, and to explain how you can get your local meron the back page to reimburse you for your investment. Thousands of exhibitors are already doing this.

You get them at actual cost — $7.50 per 1,000.

Put this in a shop window and it will attract as much attention as a twenty-four sheet.

Plenty of blank space for theatre name, dates, etc.

Only seven cents apiece.

Samples at exchanges.

It's Golored INSERT CARI

Six Sheet Poster 6A

Price List for

All these advertising aids can be secured from y what you want, with check or mone y order.

NOTE:—Owing to duty, ac ditional transportation quoted below do not apply to Can ada. Get Canadian change

For Outdoor Advertising POSTERS

POSTERS
One Sheet (1A and 1B) $.15
Three Sheet (3A and 3B) .45
Six Sheet (6A) .75
Twenty-four Sheet (24A) .2.40
2 x 10 Banner .2.00
PHOTOS FOR YOUR LOBBY
22 x 28 (Colored) .40

Supplementary Three Column Four Column

Advertis

FOR G GILT-EDGED Insert Cards (1 22 x 28 Gilt Fr Combination I Cardboard Still

It's Colored CARD NSER'

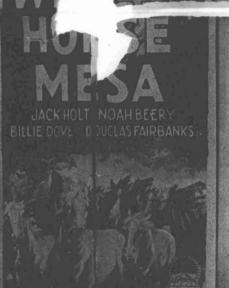

A Paramount Picture

A Garamount Picture

SET OF EIGHT COLORED LOBBY CARDS

WILD HORSE

Poster 6A

order.

Colored Lobby Card (22" x 28")

Six Sheet

ertising aids ca h check or mone ng to duty, ad litional transportation charges, etc., the prices of apply to Car da. Get Canadian Price List from your Ex-

Advertising

Supplementary (Two Column) (Adv. Only)...
Three Column
Four Column (Adv. Only)....

dvertising Material be secured from your Exchange. Send list of

FOR GENERAL EXPLOITATION

NEW-STYLE FRAMES

Two new items have been added to Paramount Ad Sales material. One is a neat and classy cardboard frame to hold a single still. Suitable for the highest class windows and store displays. Price to exhibitors, 15c each. The other is a combination itors are already doing this.

You get them at actual cost - $7.50 per 1,000.

WINDOW CARD

To the left is illustrated the striking colored window card on "Wild Horse Mesa."

Put this in a shop window and it will attract as much attention as a twenty-four sheet.

Samples at exchanges.

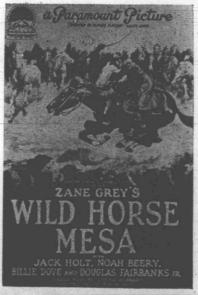

A Paramount Pa let

oster 6A Six Sheet

One Sheet Poster 1A

Advertis Price List for

All these advertising aids can be secured from the what you want, with check or more intional transportation of the control of

For Outdoor Advertising POSTERS One Sheet (1A and 1B)...
Three Sheet (3A and 3B)...
Six Sheet (6A).
Twenty-four Sheet (24A).
3' x 10' Banner...
PHOTOS FOR YOUR LOBBY
22 x 28 (Colored)...
11 x 14 Set of Eight (Colored)... For Newspaper Ads ADVERTISING CUTS One Column
Two Column
Supplementary (Two Column)
MATS, ADVERTISING, PRODUCTION,
One Column
Two Column Supplementar Three Column Four Column FOR

be secured from

GILT-EDGED Insert Cards 22 x 28 Gilt I Combination Cardboard St Heralds, per Announcement Publicity Pho Trailers—Nat 126 W. 845 So. 917 So. (

4 Music Cues are

Three Sheet Poster 3A

Twenty-four Sheet Poster 24A

HORSE ES/A

SET OF EIGHT COLORED LOBBY CARDS

ZANE GREV

Six Sheet Poster 6A

Announcement Slide

Colored Lobby Card (22" x 28")

st for Advertising Material

rtising aids can be secured from your Exchange. Send list of check or mone y order.

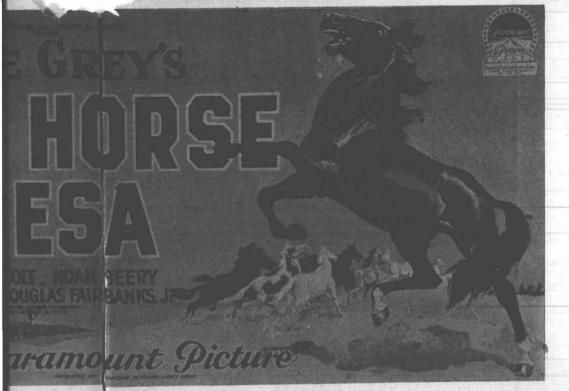

g to duty, at ditional transportation charges, etc., the prices apply to Canada. Get Canadian Price List from your Ex-

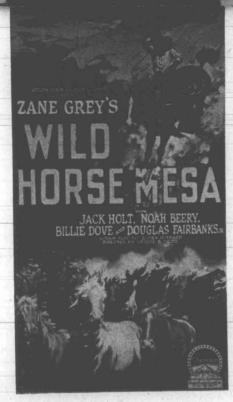

10 845 So. Wabash Av 917 So. Olive Street 1 Music Cues are gratis.

Twenty-four Sheet Poster 24A

NEW-STYLE FRAMES

Two new items have been added to Paramount Ad Sales material. One is a neat and classy cardboard frame to hold a single still. Suitable for the highest class windows and store displays. Price to exhibitors, 15c each. The other is a combination 22 x 28 lobby frame which accommodates either four 11 x 14's or a 22 x 28. It sells for $2.00. The plain 22 x 28 frames, at $1.50 each, are also available.

Three Sheet Poster 3B

This document is from the Library of Congress "Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, 1912-1977"

Collections Summary:

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004

Class M Finding Aid:

https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress